The installer runs without any errors and creates a symbolic link to the directory but I can't verify it. When I run from the command line: java -version I get an error saying that the tcj-build.sh script can't be found. How do I properly verify that the installation went fine? A: The procedure is described here: You must run 'port install jdk6u33-macosx-x64' before running 'port selfupdate'. If you attempt to run selfupdate before port install, you'll probably get this: Project jdk6u33-macosx-x64 has received version 1.0 alpha; all users should upgrade to this version. A: Even if the link is there, the new JVM might not be using it yet. It's not guaranteed. It might have defaulted to the bundled version of the JVM. To explicitly point it to the new version,

use: /opt/local/bin/java
-Djava.ext.dirs="/opt/local/lib/jvm/jdk1.6.0_33/jre/lib/ext:/opt/local/lib/jvm/jdk1.6.0_33/jre/lib/ext/apple_i386" -jar
/usr/local/jdk1.6.0_33/jre/lib/jav
