Cranes are commonly used to lift heavy loads, such as heavy cargo containers, over a potentially uneven road, into a transportation vehicle, or from one transportation vehicle to another. For instance, a transporter may load a container onto the back of a truck or onto a train or ship. Cranes commonly have a wheeled base that supports at least one structure for raising and lowering a load. A boom is attached to the load-supporting structure. A mobile crane may further include a counterweight for counteracting a large amount of the weight of the load. Cranes generally include a number of hydraulic or pneumatic cylinders. The cylinders may be used to control (raise and lower) the boom, the load-supporting structure, and the counterweight. In other words, a crane may lift a load using a combination of hydraulic or pneumatic cylinders

Macromedia Flash 8 Professional.Blog Last week I bought a new car, a completely over-the-top luxury sports car. (My old car was a 1998 Toyota Camry.) In five years, it will be gone. On Wednesday, my assistant was driving me to a dinner meeting and we hit a deer. She was so shaken up she could barely find the parking lot for the restaurant. I was even more shaken up because the impact of the collision made the bottom of the car go out from under her and for about 10 seconds, she was hanging on to the steering wheel of my car by her fingernails. Her final comment? "You know, I just don't feel like driving anymore." It's like a dentist's drill in the back of my head. I'm not one of those people who "needs" a new car after five years. (I figure I get nine good years out of my old car. Then I take the bug to college and trade it in for another.) So is this healthy? 1. She needs to remember that in the interests of safety, she is driving my car. She owes it to me to be careful. 2. Her comment was made in anger at the accident. She does not mean it, and she will be sorry later. 3. I can get something new in five years. As long as she does not mention the old car again, it will not be an issue. 4.

It's a passing thought, as in a conversation between friends. It does not have to be the center of her life. 5. It does not involve any relatives. It's just a car.

6. I'm not giving her any grief. It was an accident and it is no one's fault. Many of you have done this 3e33713323
