1. Figure 6-9: The Step Forward dialog box. It contains several elements of the tool palette. The first item is the color grid, which enables you to check for color accuracy. If it doesn't work, you can fix it or switch to the sample color map for a better way to select colors. You also have access to resolution and image size. 2. Click OK. Photoshop opens a dialog box where you can select a Target Res image size, and you see a ruler to specify the dimensions of the canvas. You also have access to a color picker that enables you to select the color for the Target Res image. Figure 6-10 shows the Target Res dialog box. 3. Drag the top row of the dialog box to the right until you reach the right edge of the canvas where you want to create your image. * * * * Figure 6-10: The Target Res dialog box. 3. Click OK. Photoshop creates a canvas with the dimensions you specified. 4. Click the New Layer button from the Library tab to create a new layer. The New Layer dialog box opens. 5. Type a name for your layer, such as background. * * * Figure 6-11: The new layer dialog box. 6. Click OK. The layer icon appears on the layers panel. 7. Set the blending mode of the new layer to Soft Light. Photoshop blends the image layer over the background layer, softening the colors. 8. Click the Edit tab and select the Type tool. The Options bar for the Type tool (refer to Figure 6-3) appears. 9. Click the pencil icon, and then select the Basic text tool. 10. Type the text on the Photoshop canvas. You can type the text in a variety of ways: • Click where you want to type. The text area appears. • Press the letter or number keys on the keyboard. You can type the entire word at once by holding down the Shift key while typing. • Use the Option or Alt keys for special characters. • Pressing the Control key selects and typing changes the typeface. •

Q: How to completely hide a CKEditor instance? I'm trying to hide a CKEDITOR instance but it doesn't work. Here's my code. $(document).ready(function() { $('.nokeyword').on('click', function() { var node = this.closest('.ckeditor'); $(node).hide(); $('.ckeditor').show(); }); $('#toolbar-menu').on('click', function(e) { $('#id_ckeditor').hide(); $('#id_toolbar_editor').show(); }); $('.toolbar-editor').on('click', function() { $(this).hide(); $('#id_toolbar_editor').show(); }); }); I've checked and done everything correctly. It should work. A: I used this script to hide the ckeditor after the DOM is ready. And this to show the toolbar $(document).ready(function() { var editor = CKEDITOR.inline('editor'); $('.nokeyword').on('click', function() { editor.hide(); }); $('#toolbar').on('click', function(e) { editor.show(); }); }); Here is the JSFiddle : All of the clips from The Grand Seduction are embedded below. As with the Michael Douglas and Catherine Zeta-Jones films, this was all great. I was never under the impression that this was a bad flick. Sure, it didn't have nearly as many

Q: Initializer list vs Base classes for calling member functions I have something like this: class A { virtual int foo() { return 0; } }; class B: public A { int bar(); }; class C: public A { int bar(); }; int main() { // A x; A y(1); // OK B z(1); // OK C w(1); // Error: no matching function for call to 'A::A()' } I am wondering what is the benefit for initializer list in A y(1)? class A { virtual int foo() { return 0; } }; int main() { A x(1); // OK B y(1); // OK C z(1); // OK } A: You can't do A x(1); because that doesn't correspond to an instance of a class A (as opposed to a static A x). As in your second snippet, x is an object of type A and it can be initialised using an initialiser list. by the LC/MS/MS method in our study. They have been shown to be highly variable inter-lot, but also intralot, \[[@B29]-[@B31]\]. Furthermore the frequency of significantly low concentrations found for urinary SP metabolites in our study was much higher than in studies of SP metabolites in blood and tissues \[[@B32],[@B33]\]. In contrast to our study, average urinary excretion levels of SP metabolites have been shown to be lower in children (0.64 - 0.86 mg/g creatinine) as compared to adults (1.74 mg/g creatinine) \[[@B10]\]. Blocked subcutaneous fenitrothion injections given twice weekly at LD~50~50 to Rana pipiens larvae and subsequent analysis of selected SP metabolites in blood of individually treated animals did not show an increased concentration of the biotransformation metabolites nor an increased concentration of unfunctionalized SP in Rana pipiens blood \[[@B34]\]. It is now generally accepted that the SP active principle in Rana pipiens is confined to the metabolite (or metabolites) SP-glucuronide
