if you are a fan of the call of duty series, you must play the call of duty: wwii game. it takes place during world war ii, and it features a huge map with wwii setting. call of duty: wwii brings in a new dynamic, an obstacle avoidance mode, where you have to avoid obstacles while using your gun and fighting off enemies. the name of the mode is quite literal as well. call of duty: wwii has been an online multiplayer game with no split screen option for its first season, but it has plans to bring in the option in its next season, as well. to date, it has received three in-game purchases with season pass at $49.99 each, and you can choose from three different time periods. the most recent one is winter event that will keep you playing with new content. it appears that rage 2 has enough controversy surrounding it that you shouldn't be forced to buy it simply because you want to play a multiplayer-style game. just because this game has online multiplayer, doesn't mean that it will give you the right to buy it as a standalone game for $60. rage 2 creators are already open to dropping the requirement to buy the game online. this is exactly what happened with blizzard's world of warcraft, which was really good, and then, at a later time, it was also an option to not have to pay for the game at all to get the game. there were waves of people skipping the initial payment when they went to play the game later, and blizzard was open to it. i doubt that rage 2 will go through the same thing, since they have made a source of income for years from the game, but if you really want to play this game, you will be able to if you don't want to buy the full game, at least for now.
